For the benefit of others of our friends, who will find it a good place to "drive dull care away," we will state that the trip is a pleasant one, and that there is but one danger, judging from the connct of the Whige in Ashland on the night of election, an evident disposition for carrousing too much, and continuing " as long as the whisky lasts." Another homily on temperance, by a few Editors in Ohio, would have sounded like crowd we allude to.
